

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Christiansen v. Graver Tank Works, 223 Ill. 142, 79 N. E. 97; Frasier v. Charleston & W. C. Ry. Co., 73 S. C. 140, 52 S. E. 964. Where the evidence of foreign law includes conflicting expert testimony, there is considerable authority that the question must be submitted to the jury. Electric Welding Co. v. Prince, 200 Mass. 386, 86 N. E. 947; Harrison v. Atl. Coast Line R. Co., 168 N. C. 382, 84 N. E. 519. It would seem that more accurate results are to be obtained by submitting the question to the court in any event. This was the position taken in the principal case. Cf. Ongaro v. Twohy, 57 Wash. 668, 107 Pac. 834.

Infants — Avoidance of Contract during Minority. — Workmen's Compensation Act provides all contracts of hiring, including those of minors, shall be presumed to have been made with reference to the act. (1911, N. J. Pub. Laws, c. 95.) Plaintiff, an infant, having been injured in the course of his employment due to the negligence of his employer, seeks to disaffirm his contract and recover for negligent injury. Held, that he may not recover. Young v. Sterling Leather Works, 102 Atl. 305 (N. J.).

Contracts of an infant as a rule are merely voidable at his option. Gillis v. Goodwin, 180 Mass. 140, 61 N. E. 813. But a contract for necessaries is valid so far as it is executed. However, the resulting obligation seems rather of a quasi-contractual nature. See W. A. Keener, "Quasi-Contract," 7 Harv. L. Rev., 57, 72–73. But see Cooper v. State, 37 Ark. 421, 425. Contracts for services have generally not been included within the category of necessaries, and accordingly some courts have refused to declare them binding. Gaffney v. Hayden, 110 Mass. 137. Since the rule allowing infants to avoid their contracts is intended to be for their benefit, other courts have held a contract cannot be avoided if upon consideration of the whole agreement it appears the infant derives a manifest advantage. Clements v. London, etc. R., [1894] 2 Q. B. 482. This rule has sometimes been restricted to executed contracts. Spicer v. Earl, 41 Mich. 191, 1 N. W. 923. But the doctrine permitting an infant to avoid his contracts does not extend to contracts to do that which he was bound by law to perform. Baker v. Lovett, 6 Mass. 78. See Co. Litt. 172 a. Nor does it apply to contracts entered into under statutory authority or direction. People v. Mullin, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 697; United States v. Bainbridge, 1 Mason (U. S.), 71.

Insurance — Insurance Agents — Waiver of Condition by Broker Acting for Insured. — The insured had a Florida broker to take care of all its insurance. This broker applied for a policy to the defendant, a Pennsylvania insurance company not doing business in Florida. The defendant made inquiries of the broker as to the condition of the property, mailed the policy to the broker, and paid the broker a commission out of the premium. A condition of the policy was broken by the insured with the assent of the broker. A Florida statute provided that any person in Florida, who received money on account of any contract of insurance, or who in any wise made any contract of insurance for an insurance company, was to be deemed an agent of such insurance company to all intents and purposes. (1914, Fla. Comp. Laws, § 2765.) Held, that the defendant was chargeable with the broker's assent. American Fire Ins. Co. v. King Lumber Co., 77 So. 168 (Fla.).

The case must turn upon the relation between the broker and the defendant. A broker, employed to procure insurance, should ordinarily be regarded as the agent of the person who employed him. Allen v. German American Ins. Co., 123 N. Y. 625, 25 N. E. 309; Parrish v. Rosebud Mining Co., 140 Cal. 635, 74 Pac. 312; Ben Franklin Ins. Co. v. Weary, 4 Brad. (Ill.) 74; United Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 92 Fed. 127. See 2 BIDDLE, INSURANCE, § 1077. The fact that he receives a commission out of the premium is not enough to make him an agent of the insurer. McGraw Co. v. German Fire Ins. Co., 126 La. 32, 52 So. 183.